The Mystery of the Cleaning Lady:

A WRITER LOOKS AT CREATIVITY AND NEUROSCIENCE

Sue Woolfe

Bestselling author Sue Woolfe tracks the journey of her novel, The Secret Cure, through her interest in theories about creativity from the field of neuroscience. Continuing the work Woolfe started with Kate Grenville of books about writing, this is a fascinating case study of a novel-in-progress.

Feather Man

Rhyll McMaster

Set in Brisbane during the stultifying 1950s, this account of the betrayal of love throws us into the disordered world of Sookie, a young artist. As she transits warily to the London of the 'swinging' 70s, she comes up against those who would try to steal her very identity.

Sookie attracts four suitors. One wants to be her local hero, another is adept at sleight of hand, and the latest looks like a knight in fake armour.

But the first had tried to hijack her soul. In this dark comedy of the fictions of the heart live unforgettable characters.
